Mr. Martin Worthington five miles east of Hartford, killed a pig on the 10th that was only 8 months old, and weighed in the straight sum of 270 lbs. The pig was a handsome little pig, and was a better porker than any you can make a better porker.

What Next?

There has been discovered on the farm of Mr. Martin Worthington, near Foxville, a small black cow, near Foxville, which was thought to be a very rare silver cow. It is just as we have no other on our own farm, and is the luckiest of our county. We have one of the richest counties in the State, with proper development.

FOR TARIFF REDUCTION.

The Father of Free Quinine Campaigns Has Increased Home Production and Saved the People $300,000,000.

(New York News)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Hon. James A. McKenzies, of Kentucky, now visiting here, gave a great deal of attention to the question of tariff during his three terms in Congress, and introduced the bill which resulted in putting quinine on the free list. His speeches on the general subject of tariff duties attracted much attention at the time and are still referred to as models of clear and courageous statesmanship.

The conversation of the Star called on Mr. McKenzie today and suggested him in conversation on the present situation of affairs.

"From the standpoint only of an observer," said Mr. McKenzie, in reply to a question, "I can say that everything looks favorable to action by this Congress. The old arguments against reducing tariff duties have all been exploded, and now that the President has taken up the cudgel in favor of it, the battle, I should say, is about won."

Mr. McKenzie had read the leader in yesterday's Star outlining the tariff bill that the present Congress will be called on to consider. Referring to it he said: "Governor Doremus in that article gives us good sound sense and the soundest sort of Democracy, particularly like the line he follows in proposing an enlargement of the free list. Protectionists are always weak in their argument relating to consequences they affirm must follow putting an article on the free list."

"Did they expose weakness at the time you were discussing the case of quinine?"

"In the most pronounced degree, as was specially shown afterward."

"What were the arguments used by the quinine manufacturers at that time?"

"The arguments used were in general that the passage of the bill putting the sulphate and salts of quinine on the free list would result in breaking down utterly the quinine manufacturers of this country and placing the commerce of these alkaloids in the United States at the mercy of the English, German, French, and Italian manufacturers. In addition it was argued that it would throw out of employment all the skilled and unskilled laborers and artisans engaged in the manufacture in the United States and result in establishing a practical monopoly in favor of the foreign producers of this drug, thereby rendering the price dearer instead of cheaper to the American consumer."

"What was the condition of the industry at that time?"

"In June, 1878, when the free quinine bill was passed, there were but four small stores of quinine in the United States, Messrs. Powers & Weightman, Boston; and Messrs. Keeney & McIntosh and A. L. White & Co. The amount produced by these firms was, according to the best information I have been enabled to gather, something more than twelve limited thousand ounces of the sulphate of quinine, in connection with a smaller amount of the cheaper alkaloids, such as cinchonidine, cinchonine, etc., and taking Mr. Nimmo's statistics as to the importation of foreign quinine in connection with the domestic unacclimated article, the amount annually consumed in the United States must have been something like approximately 100 million ounces. The cost of the sulphate of quinine per ounce, as shown by the Druggists' Circular of New York for June, 1878, the date of the passage of the free quinine bill, was three dollars and fifty-two and a half cents per ounce, at wholesale. The alkaloids were then admitted free, except that there was a differential duty of 10 percent on all barrels shipped to this country from points east of the Cape of Good Hope. It is now entirely free."

"What is the condition of the industry today, after the article has been free nearly nine years?"

"After the drug has been on the free list nearly nine years you will find, by consulting the Druggists' Circular for 1887, that the wholesale price of the sulphate of quinine has been as low as 37 cents per ounce, as against $3.52 per ounce on the day the law making it free went into effect, and the consumption of quinine is now more than 1,000,000 ounces, as against 2,000,000 in June, 1878. In addition to this, the manufacture of the drug has been vastly increased in America since that date, as shown by the fact that the number of manufacturers and manufacturing chemists have been increased from four, the number in existence at the date of the passage of the bill making the drug free, to twelve in 1887, as evidenced by the following list, viz: A. C. White & Co., Park, Davis & Co., Stevens, Barnes & Jeter, Mullin & Chemical Company, William H. Merrill Chemical Company, Edward H. Smith, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and William R. Warner of Philadelphia, Pa."

"It will be seen that the industry, instead of being crushed by the bill making the drug free, has flourished to the point of manufacturing establishments and in the amount of quinine produced by a large percentage, while the cost to the consumer has been lessened from six to eight mills per annum, effecting a saving to the consumer of quinine in the United States of not less than $300,000,000 in the eight years past."

"Messrs. Powers & Weightman, who complained in 1869 that the passage of the free quinine bill would utterly bankrupt their industry, have since lost their immense stockpile, destroyed by fire, but have rebuilt on an extended scale, and under the new order of things, and in consequence of manufacturing a larger amount of quinine than they were before the passage of the bill making the drug free.

"These are not idle speculations upon the subject of tariff reform and reduction of the treasury surplus, but are drawn from the inexorable logic of facts, and I see no good reason why the same principle will not apply to all raw materials and many other articles mentioned in President Cleveland's very able message to Congress and Governor Doremus's suggestive editorial in the Star of yesterday."

"You will remember that the quinine bill is the only direct consequence that has been made upon the purely protective features of the Morrill tariff bill, and is entitled to a hearing for the reason that it speaks from the standpoint of experiment and actual accomplishment, and not from the mere dictum of theory."

GOOD MANAGEMENT.

Put on General Viles is certainly a good manager. His military and successful management of the street Department committed to the charge, for his annual report shows the most gratifying results. The revenues of the Department have increased over the preceding year nearly $1,000,000, which may be termed the high water mark, while the disbursements are little more than two million dollars, two years since, under the Republican regime, the deficiency was $700,000. This sum has been reduced nearly three-fourths under economical Democratic administration, and if the present ratio of reduction continues a few months, the deficiency will disappear entirely.

MILLWICK, KY.

December 11th, 1887.—Miss Dora Crawford has taught in this district a very successful school. She has a fine educational. She possesses a wonderful influence over her pupils. She is a good judge of the merits and capacities of her pupils, hence she knows just how to come in contact with her school, and above all, she is a Christian lady. She brought this first of all qualifications to bear upon the minds of our children.

THE NEW RAILROAD.

Its Feasibility Outlined by One Who Feels its Importance.

SULLIVAN SPRINGS, Dec. 15, '87.

Editor Herald:

Having seen several editorials and communications in your sheet with reference to the proposed railroad from Hawesville, in Hancock county, to Beaver Dam, via Fordville, Sulphur Springs and Hartford, I am struck with the practicability and necessity of the road. Connection would be made at Hawesville with the L. & N. & T. river road with Louisville and all points east and west by that route. A Beaver Dam it would connect with the N. & M. V., the only road we now have. This would offer to the great majority of the people of the county a choice of routes to the commerce and travel of our rapidly advancing country. A great section of our country, which is particularly rich in resources, and which has so far had no means of outlet for its riches, would be penetrated and developed by this road.

Fordville is already a trading point for quite a large territory. All that the county is without any means of transportation. All along the route from Fordville to Sulphur Springs coal and timber cover and underlie the surface of the earth. Near Sulphur Springs coal, limestone, iron ore—apparently to be of a great richness, and fine building sandstone are found in abundance. Springs of medical water flow from the all-containing bowels of the earth. Really, it would seem, the nature has been so lavish of her riches, and rarely has man been so skilful to take advantage of such brilliant opportunities.

With the assurance of railroad facilities, capitalists would be led to investigate the claims of this section as a field for investment and enterprise. Our summer resort would attract the attention of the outside world, and the time would soon come when we could proudly boast of one of the foremost health resorts in the country. From this point the route through a good farming country, the value of which would be greatly enhanced. Here we strike the county seat of our large and unexplored country. Holding by rights of primary possession the seat of administration of county affairs, and consequently a great part of the relations of the county, with but scanty and poor facilities for making these connections with the outside world, it is entirely necessary this road would be the Bonum Desideratum to Hartford, and with the cheerful prospects before them that this road would mean up, no doubt her citizens would lend their minds, muscle and capital to the further development of our natural resources.

It is no talking word of factories and mines, industry and enterprise that this road would mean up, no doubt her citizens would lend their minds, muscle and capital to the further development of our natural resources. "Confidence begets confidence," and until we ourselves do something to show the faith we profess in our country resources, where are we going to look to it as offering any superior inducements. To sum them, the advantages of this route, railroad facilities would be extended to a large section altogether without them, another consideration would be offered a choice of routes, and competition would ensue. Our richest natural section would have outlet. Property values would be increased. A general industrial settlement would be awakened that would be far-reaching in its effects. Capitalists would be encouraged to give attention to our claims, and aid in the development of the matter. A demand would be created for immigration instead of emigration. Our citizens would look forward to better things and would be more contented with their condition. Money would become more plentiful, and an era of prosperity and progress would dawn upon us.

The Fitness of the Two Men.

The Republicans of the Eighth Senatorial district have nominated Lewis Jones, of Muhlenberg, for State Senator to succeed Hon. Ben E. Hill, resigned. Jones has served several terms in the House, and is an easy-going old backwoodsman, without any particular ability to fit him for any public place. The Democrats have nominated Hamilton Ringer to oppose him, and will elect him. He is a workman, a Knight of Labor, and was the majority of the men who composed the convention, which endorsed the present State and National Administration, and declared renewed allegiance to the principles of the Democratic party. There are one thousand miles in the district, and these will be found at the polls next Thursday, when the special election is held, ready and anxious to vote for Ringer.

In Memoriam.

Mr. T. J. Lyle died at his home near Hartford on the 6th inst., after a brief illness, aged 56 years. It is at all times more or less painful to chronicle the advent of the angel of death, but when his noble person the heart of his dear friends is bowed low by the blow, it is well nigh unbearable. When the delicate and affectionate relations existing between parent and child, brother and sister are severed, to be united only when the dark and unknown voyage of the mystic river is made, then indeed is required the sustaining power of Christian faith. But we will not dwell on the torturing pang of dire bereavement.

Mr. Lyle was one of our best citizens, and will be easily missed by all. He was a true and affectionate husband, and an industrious father. He was a true and affectionate father, and will be missed by all his children, and his family and friends. He was a true and affectionate citizen, and will be missed by all his fellow citizens. He was a true and affectionate man, and will be missed by all his friends.

A BIG MORTGAGE.

The L. St. L. & T. Pledge Its Past, Present and Future for Ready Cash.

The county clerk was busy yesterday recording a mortgage from the Louisville, St. Louis and Texas railroad to the Central Trust Company of New York for $2,500,000 on its right of way, road-bed, ties, rails, road, side-tracks, bridges, depot buildings, grounds, cars, locomotives and all and every species of property owned or hereafter to be acquired by the mortgage.

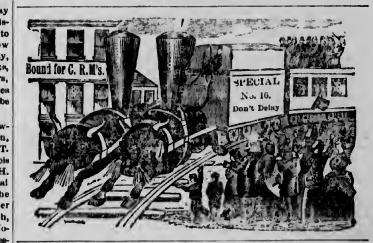

The mortgage is signed by J. C. Fawcett, president, and J. K. Mcracken, vice president, of the L. St. L. & T. Railroad Company, and by E. Francis Hyde, second vice president, and C. H. Batcock, secretary of the Central Trust Company, and is to secure the payment of 2,500 bonds of the former company, of the value of $1,000 each, bearing 6 per cent. interest from November 25, 1887, and due at a corresponding date in the year 1912.

Following this, with provisions of the tender and of even date, is filed for record the second mortgage of the company to secure the payment of 250 bonds of $1,000 each, corresponding to the first mortgage issue. The mortgages are very voluminous, and have been recorded in all the counties along the line of the road, beginning with Jefferson county. After it has been copied here it will be forwarded to Henderson and recorded there.

A mortgage of this kind was filed in this way before work on the road was begun, but it was found desirable to cancel it and give the new one in its stead.
